Introducing the Apple Software Update Program

We're constantly working on ways to improve our software, because every innovation and improvement we make can help your organization work more efficiently. And now there's an even easier way for you to take advantage of Apple's latest advancements.

It's called the Apple Software Update Program.

For one annual fee, you'll get updates from Apple. We'll mail them to you as soon as they're released. Which means you'll no longer have to keep track of when and where we're offering an update, because you'll receive them in your mailbox—automatically.

Two great options.

You can take advantage of our stand-alone subscriptions, which will ensure that you get all the updates for a specific software product—for example HyperCard®, Macintosh® System software, Apple IIGs® System software, A/UX® System software, AppleShare® File Server software, or Apple® IIe Workstation software.

Or you can subscribe to our more comprehensive Network Administration package, which guarantees that you'll get the latest system software and networking and communications software, as well as the Technical Bulletins that'll explain how to get the most out of your Apple products.

And regardless of the option you choose, if you want to make copies of Apple software to distribute within your organization, it's only a matter of filling out a Right to Update License Agreement.

Your Apple reseller or representative can help you determine which option is right for you. To start your subscription, you'll just have to fill out a simple form. Then, the next time we release an update, you'll get it straight from the postman.

And neither rain, nor snow—nor even sleet—will prevent it from reaching your desk.
