PACIFIC
MICROLAB COMPUTER CENTRES

At Pacific Microlab, we've got the computer you're looking for. And the software and the printers. Plus the cables, the accessories, the publications, and everything else. You name it; if it's to do with computers, we've got it.

What size computer do you need? Do you need a 386 or a 486?

When buying your computer system, it's important to determine what you will be using it for and the budget available. This ensures you don't waste money on a system which is simply too big for your needs. An assessment of your current and future needs also ensures you're not buying technology that will be obsolete in the future. Your system will be able to cope with your future needs without the hassle of having to upgrade the capacity of your system a short time down the track.

The following information assesses the two most popular computer sizes available and is designed to make your buying decision easier. However, feel free to call into any of our 13 stores, to discuss your individual requirements in detail with our friendly, knowledgeable staff.

486's - Big performance at a competitive price.

486's are capable and fast enough for full time desk top publishing, CAD applications, and large spreadsheet applications. If you are using a number of programs full time and speed is important, then a 486 is the ideal solution. A 486 system is also ideal as a file server for a network of computers.

386's - Ideal for small business, home office and entertainment.

Will run most day to day applications such as word processing, managing small budgets or running a small database. Affordably priced for the average consumer, but without compromise on quality, service and support. Their competitive price also makes them affordable enough for the small business to computerise the whole office without breaking the budget. A 386 also provides an ideal, cost effective solution for student needs and entertainment.

Service and Support.

If you rely on your computer system as a means of doing business it's worth the extra investment to ensure you get the appropriate service and support required. The quality Arrow range of computers provides the level of support and service needed to ensure that downtime on your business computer system is minimised.

At Pacific we have a computer system to suit your budget and your needs.

Come in and say hello.

By far the best way to see what's what is to come in and talk it over with our friendly staff. We'll show you the hardware and the software that suits both your needs and your budget. Store locations are listed on the back cover.

Or take advantage of our "shop at home" service.
